

FIVE LOAVES a poem by Lynn Fowler

Just five loaves	Just one life
Lord, what are they	Lord, what is it when thousands faint with hunger	to millions crying all about?	dying
Five small loaves	every day?
Lord, they would barely	One small, ordinary life meet the need	can this life make of one.	a mark on even one?
For five thousand?	One useless life!
Shall we give	Lord, take to each a crumb?	bless
Five useless loaves!	break
Yet You took:	and give and their smallness	this life vanished	no longer insignificant in Your infinity;	but multiplied You blessed	by all You are.
speaking words of power, bringing change;
You broke:
cracked their crusty shell and tore apart
their comfortable roundness; You gave and multitudes received more than enough.
